Finding the right person to translate English text into a language that is considered by some cultures as “forbidden” was a challenge. Once we identified the translator, she was unable to complete the work as she started to be persecuted due to her religious beliefs. Now she is now escaping within her own country to ensure she doesn’t get killed. It is a shame that these things are still happening even in the 21st century and especially because she is a woman. In an effort to protect the translator, we decided not to share her name publicly and to rely on the digital technologies that we have access to today to do the Pashto translation. We apologize if this translation is not perfect. --FRIDA CANO
